Zulu king's call for responsible parenting

The Zulu king, His Majesty, King Goodwill Zwelethini, has appealed to parents to take an interest in their children's education to help improve pass rates in schools.

He said while he was happy with improved matric results in KwaZulu-Natal, more needed to be done to deal with challenges, starting with the participation of parents.

"My message to parents is that they should not only care about their children's education when results are released but should be involved all the way," said the king.

He slammed their non-attendance of meetings and the election of School Governing Body members along friendship lines, and appealed that only worthy candidates be elected into such structures.

The king also cautioned teacher unions against bringing turmoil in public schools, questioning whether their children attended such schools.

"Remove unruly and rotten elements among teachers, your unions and declare that anyone that disrupts education is an enemy of the people," said the king.

The opening of the legislature was attended by high profile figures including former president Jacob Zuma, former KZN premiers Ben Ngubane and Sbu Ndebele.

The king commended Zuma's decision to resign calling it a demonstration of bravery.

"I applaud Zuma's decision of February 14 and only a fool would not appreciate that what he did ensured that our country is not plunged into crisis as it sometimes happens in other African countries," said the king.

Zulu King Goodwill Zwelethini observes the national anthem ahead of delivering the keynote address to mark the opening of the fifth KZN Legislature at the Royal Showgrounds on February 27.

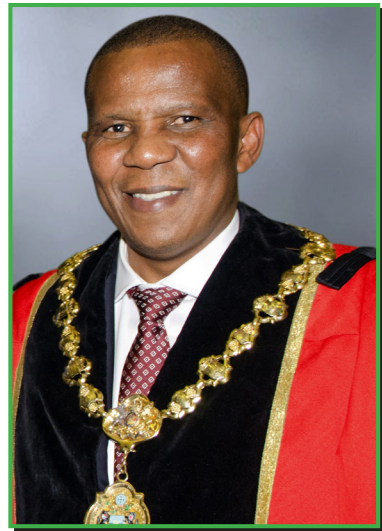

Opening of the KZN Legislature

The opening of the fifth KZN Legislature was a colourful affair with guests showcasing their fashion taste that varied from formal dress code - as worn by Msunduzi Mayor Themba Njilo and his wife, left, to traditional attire as worn by Education MEC Mthandeni Dlungwane, centre, and other members of the KZN Legislature at the Royal Showgrounds.

Mayor's Message

Themba Njilo
Msunduzi Mayor

Our leader's important words of wisdom

February is a busy month for the city and we have just witnessed and played host to the most significant events for the first quarter of the year.

Sports enthusiasts cheered canoeists as they took off for the start of the most enduring FNB Dusi Canoe Marathon, and it was a heart-warming moment when a few councillors and city officials joined yours truly in wishing canoeists well as they left the Camp's Drift start headed for the Blue Lagoon in Durban. The cheering spectators across the racial divide reminded me of Tata Nelson Mandela's observation that sport has the power to unite people across all races.

Towards the end of February, we welcomed His Majesty, King Goodwill Zwelithini, who officially marked the start of parliamentary proceedings by delivering the keynote address for the opening of the fifth KZN Legislature.

What a pleasure it was to be in the presence of the longest serving monarch in the history of the Zulu nation and to hear the words of wisdom that he imparted to all of us.

As the mayor, I was encouraged by the King's appeal to parents to take an interest in their children's education.

He said while he was happy with improved matric results in KwaZulu-Natal, much more needed to be done to deal with challenges, starting with the participation of parents.

His Majesty correctly observed that most parents only take an interest in their children's education when results were released. He reminded all of us, as parents, that we should be involved all the way. Not attending school meetings is just one of the habits that should not be allowed to develop among us as parents. With the elections of School Governing Body members at the doorstep, this is an opportunity for all of us to play our part in the education of our children. It may sound trivial, but children get extra encouragement and drive when they know that they enjoy the support from parents, neighbours, relatives and friends for both matters of education and sport.

It was equally encouraging to hear KZN Premier Willie Mchunu reminding us citizens of the role that we must play to ensure that we have safe areas so our children can play by making sure that drug peddlers are not given a chance to destroy young lives and their families in the process.

Lastly as State president Cyril Ramaphosa said in his State of the Nation Address, water scarcity is not a Cape Town or Western Cape problem but is a challenge for us all.

I would like to urge all Msunduzi residents to #savewater, #stoplandinvasion #stopillegalelectricityconnections. Together we can do more. Let us take care of our beautiful City of Choice, which is second to none.

City on my mind

Chief Financial Officer
Nelisiwe Ngcobo

It is important to pay for services rendered

As the administrative wing of the municipality, we know and appreciate that in order to be a financially viable organisation, we need to have an efficient revenue collection mechanism.

This is why we are now strengthening our revenue collection - that includes an audit of our customers - both those who pay and those defaulting.

For the record, the Department of Co-Operative Governance and Traditional Affairs revealed that municipalities in KZN are owed R13 billion by customers who vary from private businesses to government.

What was more startling though, was the revelation, that the total owed by households was a staggering R7,1 billion.

MEC Nomusa Dube Ncube was at pains to admit that if this challenge was not attended to, municipalities faced the prospect of collapsing.

She said the reality of customers not honouring their debt was something that had to be dealt with immediately.

As an illustration that we are serious about getting what is owed to the municipality, we are conducting regular checks of our debtor's book, identifying defaulting customers and disconnecting them until they have repaid the municipality.

It may not be a popular decision but it is one that will result in a positive situation for Pietermaritzburg. It is about ensuring that the municipality is in a financially viable state.

Having money in our accounts means that the municipality would be able to pay its employees each month, and it enables the municipality to rollout further services in parts that have not been reached yet. Customers may not know this but the municipality does not undertake major projects whether they involve electricity or water provision from nothing.

The Msunduzi municipality, like any other organisation goes to banks and other funding establishments to borrow money so that such projects can be rolled out. When such projects are completed, we are expected to pay back the money owed to our funders - and that is why it is important for our customers to pay the municipality for services rendered. It makes it easier for the municipality to improve the level of service delivery for the future and failure cripples the organisation.

The city's Operation Qoqa Imali is targeting residents, government departments as well as businesses who are not paying for services received.

So, our appeal, as the administrative wing of the Msunduzi Municipality is for every customer to play their role in making ours a financially viable municipality and a thriving city full of opportunities where everyone concerned gets the best services.

Premier’s warning to department heads

Lifestyle audits will soon be rolled out for senior government officials, especially in the Supply Chain Management sections, in a bid to stamp out fraud and corruption in government.

This was the undertaking made by KwaZulu-Natal Premier Willies Mchunu when he delivered the State of the Province Address at the Royal Showgrounds, Pietermaritzburg on Wednesday. He said government was concerned about episodes of fraud and corruption in departments where money, meant to serve people, was siphoned by individuals for personal gain, promising tougher sanction in future.

“We will apply a zero tolerance approach in dealing with those who are found guilty of these transgressions. We will be starting lifestyle audits of officials in high risk positions and we are starting with our supply management units,” said Mchunu. The string of adverse audit opinions, the premier continued, reflected badly on government’s ambitions to champion good governance and was eroding public confidence on government. As a response to this, all Heads of Departments and Chief Financial Officers would be held accountable for adverse audits. While adding that the senior officials would be punished, he did not indicate the kind of punishment awaiting responsible officials. He said government would instil a culture where integrity at the core of its everyday activity, and committed his government to a public-private coalition dedicated to combating fraud and corruption.

Aside from this Mchunu committed his government to among other things:

- Strengthening municipalities
 - Ensuring safer communities
- strengthening interaction between the police and communities.

KwaZulu-Natal Premier Willies Mchunu arrives with KZN Legislature Speaker Lydia Johnson for the State Of the Province Address at the Royal Showgrounds on February 28.

- Rolling out infrastructure, especially in rural areas ensuring access to water and electricity
 - Providing capacity to schools in a bid to improve education and pass rates. Mchunu appealed to communities to assist government especially in the fight against crime by reporting criminals
- to the police as opposed to harbouring them. In addition to this he also urged residents to adopt healthy lifestyles so that the public healthcare system is not drained by people suffering from diseases that could have been prevented.

MR SIZWE HADEBE (ACTING CITY MANAGER)

One of the illegal dump sites that the Municipality is tackling as part of the program to keep the city and its surrounding clean.

Municipality to tackle illegal dumping

The Msunduzi Municipality’s waste management efforts have received a boost after an agreement reached with the district municipality. This was revealed in a report tabled before a full council meeting held on January 31 at Council Chambers.

“The municipality is currently faced with a problem of ever escalating dirt due to illegal dumping, littering, unlawful and uncontrolled business activities,” read the report that also cited the municipality’s structural and systematic inability to deal with waste management effectively; as well as limited municipal resources.

The assistance will come in the form of suitably skilled human resources to assist in building and strengthening capacity within the municipality’s waste management unit. Community Services committee chairperson Sphamandla Khumalo said the move would help in ensuring that the municipality succeeded in making the city clean.

“There is no doubt that we have a serious challenge and that is why the leadership, including Exco members, have been at the forefront to make the city clean. Any assistance to beef up capacity for the city to deal with the challenge is always welcome,” said Khumalo.

Since last year, the municipality has undertaken a range of initiatives to keep the city clean galvanising local businesses, households and citizens to be part of the movement to ensure that the municipality is clean.

Move to monitor air pollution

The Msunduzi Executive Committee (Exco) members have approved a call for air quality monitors to be installed in Edendale and Northdale. This follows the tabling of the ambient air quality report at the Oribi Airport that regularly monitors air quality in the area.

The assessment is in line with national regulations to determine whether the city follows the National Environment Management Act that focuses on, among other things, the quality of air both in residential and industrial areas.

“Residents, in accordance to the Constitution, are entitled to a healthy environment that is not harmful to their health or well-being,” read the report presented to Exco members.

Currently there are two air quality monitors - one at the airport and the other in the CBD.

City Entities and Sustainable Development committee chairperson, councillor Eunice Zondi emphasised the need for monitors to be installed in all strategic parts of the municipal area.

“We need to fast track the process of installing such facilities both in Edendale and Northdale because a significant portion of the population is found in these areas,” said Zondi.

The committee noted the report that will now be sent to the full sitting.

City energy plans on track

The City’s multi-million rand electricity project that includes building new power stations and sub-stations is progressing as planned with a number of sub-stations operating better after undergoing upgrades. Infrastructure Services committee chairperson Thobani Zuma said they were looking forward to the completion of the stations.

“It is important that city residents receive power that is uninterrupted so they can go about their lives without any unnecessary hiccups,” said Zuma.

The upgrade of the electricity infrastructure forms part of the Electricity Network Development Plan that was adopted by Council during the 2012/13 financial year. After this, Council approved the R250 million loan from the Development Bank of Southern Africa to address ageing electricity infrastructure. Some of the projects that were funded by the loan include:

- Upgrade of the 132/11kV Northdale Substation where two new 40 MVA 132/11kV Power Transformers with the new 11kV switchboard were installed.
- Upgrade of the 132/11kV Prince Alfred Substation where a 132 Gas Insulated Switchgear was installed.
- Upgrade of the 132/33/11kV Retief Substation (phase 1) which involves the installation of a 40MVA 132/11kVPower Transformer.
- Establishment of a 132/kV City Grid (phase 1) which involves the installation of new 132kV circuits between Retief, Archbell and Pine Street Substations into the Prince Alfred Substation.

The provision of stable and reliable power is seen as one of the crucial elements for the city as it seeks to attract more investment from companies that want to do business in the city. An increase in investment provides a chance for city residents to get much needed jobs.

Birds of Prey Sanctuary

Situated on 60 hectares of scenic valley bushveld, within easy access of both Durban and Pietermaritzburg, the African Bird of Prey Sanctuary is a safe-haven to the widest selection of indigenous raptors in Southern Africa.

The African Bird of Prey Sanctuary is a working facility dedicated to the conservation of indigenous raptors and is base to on-going research, breeding and rehabilitation projects for birds of prey. The majority of these projects run 'behind the scenes' to ensure that the integrity of the wild birds is not compromised and that a high release success rate is achieved. The sanctuary is also, however, home to a wide selection of captive-bred or 'non-releasable rehabilitation' birds of prey. These raptors can be viewed in their 'micro-environment' enclosures by anyone who wishes to visit and learn about South Africa's magnificent aerial predators.

The Centre also provides education about birds of prey, and the threats that they face which is an important part of raptor conservation. One of the primary roles of the African Bird of Prey Sanctuary is to introduce raptors, in all their magnificence, to the general public. To facilitate this, a specially trained group of raptors are flown in daily flight displays. These demonstrations allow the raptors themselves to become both teachers and ambassadors for their wild counterparts, so that members of the public can experience these normally rare and elusive birds first hand.

Facilities at the centre include a gallery where you will find unique pieces of African art. There are crafts if you are just looking for a memento and Kestrel Café providing great view of the surrounding area and something to eat. Visiting when there is a flying display offers a special experience. Some of these birds come so close to you that you can see the detail of every feather and feel the breeze against your skin as they fly past.

It is hoped that people, both young and old, and from all walks of life come away with an appreciation of South Africa's fantastic diversity of raptor after seeing the birds first-hand.
